GENEALOGY FOR INHERITANCE PURPOSES

If a person dies without leaving a last will and testament, but owns property, the so-called legal order of succession (intestacy) applies. That means that the closest relatives of the deceased have the right to inherit.

However, due to historical circumstances, migration or state border changes, the inheritors may not be known, or may only be partially known. They would never even learn that they can come into inheritance were it not for genealogical offices such as the company of Genealozi, which launch a search for these inheritors in order to help them exercise their rights.

Similar offices have been operating for around 180 years all over the world. They originate from France and are internationally recognised as competent aid in searching for unknown inheritors.

Letter of recommendation

Dear Sirs and Madams,

As a competence center for historical research and transnationally acting genealogical office I can recommend cooperating with the Genealozi d.o.o. office, both based on their specialist knowledge and based on the personal qualifications of their dedicated historians and coworkers.

Inheritance cases connected with Croatia, Serbia, Bosnia and Slovenia were successfully solved only due to employing of their historians in the procurement of (historical) certificates, diplomas and documents, as well as some complex heir tracing.

I can therefore highly recommend Genealozi d.o.o. for cooperation in inheritance cases.

For all further questions I am gladly at your disposal and remain

With cordial greetings

GENEALOZI d.o.o.

The office of the company of Genealozi is situated in the very centre of Zagreb, the capital of the Republic of Croatia. The company of Genealozi d.o.o. searches for persons who have the right to inherit, and focuses on Croatia, Serbia, Slovenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, and Macedonia.

The company employs highly qualified genealogists who speak foreign languages extremely well. The company itself has its own archives, databases of the whole world, and a well-developed network of correspondents spread throughout the world.

For the past several hundred years, Croatia has been a classical emigration country. Roughly 120 years ago, its citizens were emigrating mostly to Argentina, Chile, Canada or the USA. After World War II, Germany, Switzerland and Austria became the favourite destinations of the majority of Croatian emigrants.

The last great wave of emigration was during the so called Homeland War.

The Croatian membership in the EU, the freedom of movement of its citizens within the EU, and the trend of "non-family households" are all factors which the company of Genealozi will explore more intensively in the coming years and decades on this territory.

FEE

As is customary in this line of business, the fee charged by the company of Genealozi in cases related to inheritance consists exclusively of a percentage of the inheritance that the company Genealozi helps the successors to receive.

The fee is paid only after the inheritor receives the inherited property.

If the inheritors do not come into inheritance after all, although it was expected that they would, the company of Genealozi will not charge any fee. That means that the company of Genealozi operates at its own risk. The persons found who are potential inheritors will not bear any costs in such a case.

Newspaper article about a successful heir search done by Genealozi published in the largest Austrian newspaper „Kronen Zeitung“.
